Speaker:

Charlie Dent, Vice President, Aspen Institute;
Executive Director, Congressional Program

9:15 – 11 AM: Roundtable Discussion

Why Africa? Why Kenya?

Although African nations have infrequently been perceived as central partners in the pursuit of U.S. national security and economic interests, currently and in the years to come, the people and countries in Africa will play a critical role in confronting global threats and challenges that are equally vital to America's well-being. Terrorist organizations, including ISIS, Al-Qaeda, and Al-Shabaab, take advantage of pockets of fragility in Africa, and their presence on the continent poses a direct threat to U.S.

interests. The region is home to 30 percent of the world's supply of critical minerals, which are viewed as essential for U.S. national, economic, and environmental security. As U.S. competition and confrontation with China and Russia increases, Africa is becoming a focus of this entanglement. Moreover, Russia's invasion of Ukraine has significantly exacerbated food insecurity on the continent, which also affects the U.S.

Economically, the African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA), once it is fully operational, will be the world's fifth-largest economy, with a potential GDP of more than $3.4 trillion. Africa is the last, and largest, emerging market and offers the final big supply chain and consumer prospects, with opportunities like the ones Southeast Asia presented 20 years ago. By 2050, it is estimated that the continent will represent 25 percent of the global population and one-in-three working age people will live in Africa. It is the youngest continent in the world with 60 percent of the population under the age of 25.

Speaker:

Margaret Whitman, U.S. Ambassador to Kenya

11 – 11:15 AM: Break

11:15 AM – 1 PM: Roundtable Discussion

U.S. Role in Africa's Development: The Past and the Road Ahead

The U.N. Development Program characterizes Africa as a "development paradox – a rich continent with poor nations." Africa, however, with significant help from the United States, has experienced substantial improvements over the past 20+ years in economic growth, job creation, private sector expansion, education, and health care. A smaller proportion of Africans now live in extreme poverty and far fewer African countries are classified as low-income than has been the case over the past half century.

Nevertheless, several more recent factors have severely eroded this impressive progress. COVID-19, growing food insecurity, adverse weather conditions, and armed conflict have significantly undermined years of development gains, leading to the presence of multiple peacekeeping missions, large displacement of people, and unprecedented levels of humanitarian aid. Africa's economic growth has been disrupted, inflation has risen, borrowing costs have grown, and demand in major export markets has softened. Among major concerns for the near-term are the heavy burden of debt servicing, instability created by election cycles, geopolitics and war, and the lingering threat of food insecurity.

The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) provides significant assistance to African countries to address these challenges. The former USAID administrator will discuss how the U.S. has contributed to Africa's development in the past and how the U.S. should strategize for the future.

Speaker:

Rajiv Shah, President, The Rockefeller Foundation; former Administrator of USAID

1 – 2 PM: Working Lunch

Discussion continues between members of Congress and scholars on U.S. development partnership with Africa.

2 – 4 PM: Educational Site Visit
PEPFAR/DREAMS

As part of the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), the Determined, Resilient, Empowered, AIDS-free, Mentored and Safe (DREAMS) program launched in 2015 offering a comprehensive, multi-sectoral, age-appropriate package of core interventions to address key factors that make girls and young women particularly vulnerable to HIV. Adolescent girls and young women account for 74 percent of new HIV infections among all adolescents in sub-Saharan Africa, and nearly 1,000 adolescent girls and young women are infected with HIV daily. Social isolation, poverty, discriminatory cultural norms, orphanhood, gender-based violence, and inadequate schooling all contribute to their vulnerability to HIV and a life not lived to its full potential. The DREAMS partnership goes beyond individual health initiatives to address these factors. In countries where DREAMS programs are active, including Kenya, new HIV diagnoses among adolescent girls and young women are 25 percent less than in other parts of the continent.

6 – 7 PM: Pre-Dinner Remarks:Opportunities for American Businesses in Africa

Africa's potential as a growth market for U.S. based business is frequently underestimated. With the continent's fast-growing market, American businesses are finding opportunity for growth.

Speaker:

Maxwell Okello, CEO, American Chamber of Commerce, Kenya

7 – 9 PM: Working Dinner with Local Young Entrepreneurs

Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and lawmakers are rotated daily. Discussions with the local young entrepreneurs will focus on the challenges of starting new local enterprises in Kenya.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 15:7 – 9 AM: Breakfast RemarksHow Food Security in Africa Impacts Global Geopolitical Stability

Food security in African countries has a wide range of positive impacts globally – including economic growth and job creation, poverty reduction and trade opportunities, all factors in geopolitical stability.

Speaker: Dan Glickman, former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture

9 – 11:30 AM: Roundtable Discussion:U.S. for a Healthy Africa: Addressing Food (In)security and Malnutrition

Food insecurity and malnutrition, especially in sub-Saharan Africa, has increased dramatically in recent years due to multiple factors, including the global pandemic, a deepening climate crisis, high energy and fertilizer costs, weakened supply chains, and protracted conflicts, including the war in Ukraine. According to the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF), in 2022, over 20 million people and at least 10 million children faced severe food shortage in Africa following crop failures and four consecutive dry seasons. Diplomats and aid workers believe that Africa is experiencing a food crisis that is bigger and more complex than the continent has ever seen.

One consequence of the rise in food insecurity is the acute degree of malnutrition. In sub-Saharan Africa, the morbidity and mortality rate from malnutrition is increasing more than any other place in the world. Young children especially are experiencing the brunt of the lack of adequate nutrition. Globally, malnutrition is responsible for nearly 3 million lives of children under the age of five, representing nearly half of all deaths of young children. Malnutrition kills more children than malaria, tuberculosis, and HIV/AIDS combined. Moreover, child malnutrition has a lifelong compounding impact on health, society, and economies. Malnourished children are subject to physical and cognitive delays, often impeding them from reaching their complete developmental potential with significant and lifelong health, social, and economic implications.

While the U.S. Government is addressing food security and nutrition challenges through programs such as USAID's Feed the Future and humanitarian food aid support, by far the largest U.S. global health intervention over the past 20 years has been PEPFAR, the signature HIV/AIDS initiative launched in 2004 by President George W. Bush and strongly supported by each subsequent administration. With the majority of PEPFAR resources invested in Africa, the program is credited with saving 25 million lives, placing 20.1 million people on life-saving antiretroviral treatment, and enabling 5.5 million babies to be born HIV-free to mothers living with HIV. The reauthorization of PEPFAR is before Congress this year.

Speakers:

Agnes Kalibata, President, Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA)

Saul Guerrero, Senior Advisor, UNICEF

Carrie Hessler-Radelet, President & CEO, Global Communities

11:30 – 11:40 AM: Break11:40 AM – 1 PM: Roundtable Discussion:Africa – a Nexus in the U.S.-China Competition

Beginning in the late 1990s, China significantly increased its resources devoted to the African continent, expanding investment, educational and cultural programs, military cooperation, and political influence. Beijing's Belt and Road Initiative (BRI), launched in 2013 as a massive global infrastructure program, further ramped up commercial engagement with Africa. Although the United States provides significantly more development assistance to Africa, China is the continent's leading bilateral trade partner, exceeding that of the U.S. by about four times. China's foreign direct investment in Africa outpaces that from America by two-fold.

Increasingly, China's expanding commercial, diplomatic, and strategic posture in Africa has become intertwined in the power competition as significant tensions between Beijing and Washington evolve globally. More recently, the U.S. appears to be stepping up its own efforts to engage the continent and compete more directly with China. In December 2022 at the U.S.-Africa Leaders Summit, the Biden Administration pledged to invest $55 billion in Africa over the next three years. In the August 2022 "U.S. Strategy Toward Sub-Saharan Africa" proposal, the White House stated that the United States and its allies were committed to advance "high standards, values-driven, and transparent investments in Africa, as well as address political and security crises." In contrast, the Strategy characterized China's engagement on the continent as expanding its own narrow commercial and geopolitical interests that challenged the rules-based order, undercut transparency, and weakened American relations with the people and governments of Africa.

Speakers:

Steve Radelet, Director, Global Human Development Program, Georgetown University

Gyude Moore, former Minister of Public Works, Liberia; Senior Policy Fellow, Center for Global Development

1 – 2 PM: Working Lunch

Discussion continues between members of Congress and scholars on U.S. development partnership with Africa.

2 – 4 PM: Educational Site Visit Severe Acute Malnutrition Clinic

Severe acute malnutrition (SAM) results from insufficient energy, fat, protein and/or other nutrients (vitamins and minerals) to cover an individual's needs. A common method of treating children with SAM is the use of ready-to-use therapeutic food (RUTF), a highly fortified energy-dense paste. In Kenya, following five consecutive failed rainy seasons and an unyielding drought, especially in the northern and eastern parts of the country, serious food insecurity remains an issue. UNICEF estimates that nearly 250,000 children between the ages of 6 and 59 months living in Kenya are in need of treatment for SAM.

6 – 7 PM: Pre-Dinner Remarks: Empowering Women in African Communities

Maria Nzomo will address the substantial impact of empowering women who then become change makers that improve health conditions, expand economic opportunity, and reduce poverty in their communities.

Speaker:

Maria Nzomo, Professor, University of Nairobi; former Kenyan Ambassador to the United Nations and World Trade Organization in Geneva

7 – 9 PM: Working Dinner

Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and lawmakers are rotated daily. Discussions will focus on the U.S. role in women's empowerment in Africa.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 16:

6 – 6:15 AM: Grab-and-Go Breakfast

6:15 AM - 4:30 PM: Educational Site Visit

Maasai Mara National Reserve

During the site visit, members of Congress will get a better understanding of the critical role conservation and sound natural resource management play in poverty alleviation, sustainable economic development, and regional security for Kenya and other developing countries.

The session will also focus on the role of U.S. investment in the region. While in the reserve, members of Congress will meet with community leaders, government officials, and leading local and U.S.-based conservation organizations. The group will learn about innovative ways U.S. private and public investment in the region provides support to biodiversity conservation and management efforts – while strengthening the ability of local communities to manage and conserve species, habitats, and ecological processes.

There is a crisis in Africa of poaching and international trafficking of wildlife products. The decimation of elephants and other species is threatening to overturn decades of conservation and development gains. The reserve visit will highlight this issue and the implications for U.S. economic and national security interests.

The United States through USAID has invested tens of millions of dollars over the past 20 years in priority conservation areas – including community wildlife conservancies and tourism-based programs that benefit African communities. These programs provide jobs for people in the developing world, sustain economies, and contribute significantly to peace and stability.

6:30 – 8:30 PM: Working Dinner

Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and lawmakers are rotated daily. Discussions will focus on conservation efforts in Africa and its worldwide impact.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 17: - Agenda for Members of Congress

6 – 6:45 AM: Breakfast for Members of Congress Traveling to Kakuma Refugee Camp

7 AM – 4:30 PM: Members of Congress Educational Site Visit
Kakuma Refugee Camp

Kakuma Refugee Camp, located in northwestern Kenya, was established in 1992 when the “Lost Boys of Sudan” arrived, fleeing conflict in Darfur. At the same time, large groups of Ethiopians and Somalis fled their country following the fall of the Ethiopian government and growing civil strife in Somalia. Today, the camp is one of the world’s largest, housing 250,000 refugees and asylum seekers and supporting children and families from various countries, including South Sudan, Somalia, Ethiopia, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Eritrea, Uganda, and Rwanda.

With such an unprecedented number of refugees in one place, the conditions in Kakuma are harsh. The camp’s resources and infrastructure are overtaxed causing rampant malnutrition and the spread of infectious disease. Currently, new arrivals number 12,000, overwhelming the reception center’s capacity of 5,000.

The camp is managed by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) while food support is provided through the U.N.’s World Food Programme (WFP). The United States is a major contributor to UNHCR and WFP, and since 2015, the U.S. government has provided about $790 million in assistance to refugees in Kenya, including Kakuma.

7 – 9 PM: Working Dinner with the Local Peace Corps Leadership
Members of Congress, their spouses, foundation representatives, and scholars reconvene in the evening for a working dinner. Seating is arranged to expose participants to a diverse range of views and provide the opportunity for a meaningful exchange of ideas. Scholars and lawmakers are rotated daily. Discussions will focus on the Kakuma Refugee Camp and the KILELE project in Embu, Kenya and the interaction with the Peace Corps leadership attending the session.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 17 – AGENDA FOR CONGRESSIONAL SPOUSES, FOUNDATION REPRESENTATIVES, AND SCHOLARS:

7 – 8:30 AM: Breakfast Available

8:30 AM – 10 AM: Roundtable Discussion on Congressional Families
Cancer Preventive Initiative in Nairobi

The participants will learn about the Congressional Families Cancer Prevention initiative, a program of the Prevent Cancer Foundation. Congressional spouses on a bipartisan, bicameral basis, have been using their platform for decades to raise awareness about cancer prevention and early detection. The Congressional Families program highlights and helps call attention to the important work of the Prevent Cancer Foundation – in this case, providing a global grant to help fund HPV education and vaccines in Kenya to help prevent cervical cancer.

KILELE Health Association is one of the recipients of Prevent Cancer's global grant in Kenya, and the conference participants will meet with its leadership. KILELE Health targets Mbeere, a rural, resource-poor hard-to-reach part of Embu, Kenya, where women and girls still face Female Genital Mutilation (FGM); myths and misconceptions hindering women's access to health. KILELE's purpose is to improve cervical cancer prevention and early detection in this hard-to-reach area by engaging communities to increase their understanding of cervical cancer prevention and early detection. They involve cancer survivors as champions for change in behavior and improve the uptake of HPV vaccine among the target population (girls aged 10 to 16 years) and cervical cancer screening services among women.

11 AM – 3 PM: Additional Site Visit(s) to be Announced

7 – 9 PM: Working Dinner with the Local Peace Corps Leadership
