WORLD FORUM
2023 AGENDA

12:30–1:45 p.m.	Lunch and Conversation	Beach Club
	A Conversation with Susan Collins and Kyrsten Sinema Robert Doar (Moderator)
2:00–3:00 p.m.	Afternoon Sessions	Cloister
	Energy Policy: Challenges at Home and Abroad Doug Burgum Steven Koonin Chris Wright Daniel Yergin James Coleman (Moderator)
	In a $100 trillion global economy that depends on hydrocarbons for 80 percent of its energy, moving to cleaner sources of energy is more challenging than our politicized debates usually acknowledge. And yet amazing strides in energy innovation are making possible new energy sources and access to cleaner energy than we could have imagined a generation ago. What is the actual (nonpolitical) state of play in climate science? Which forms of energy innovation hold the most promise? And how have the recent geopolitics of hydrocarbons changed the policy landscape for America and its allies? Join us for an all-star panel that will explore answers to these and other important questions.
	Have We Passed Peak Woke? Bari Weiss Thomas Chatterton Williams Ross Douthat (Moderator)
	Recent years witnessed the ascent of “woke” ideology in education, media, business, the professions, and culture in America and across much of the West. Its transformation of our elite institutions has yielded a backlash that contributed mightily to the populist mood of our politics. Is the worst of this wave now behind us? Is it building still? How has it responded to the backlash against it, and how is its character changing?
	The Military We Need David Berger Joni Ernst Roger Wicker Mackenzie Eaglen (Moderator)
	Despite its prowess, the United States military is shrinking, aging, and becoming ever more expensive. The Defense Department is also struggling to adapt commercial technologies for military use in a post-monopsony market while struggling to attract new recruits. How can the military stay on the cutting edge, interesting to American youth, and prepared for worst-case scenarios, including in Asia?
3:00–5:00 p.m.	Executive Time
3:00–4:30 p.m.	Optional Documentary Screening	Cloister
	Gotham: The Fall and Rise of New York At a time when many American cities are struggling, a new documentary showcases important lessons from New York City’s recovery in the 1990s and 2000s. Gotham: The Fall and Rise of New York shows how new leadership and bold reforms saved America’s largest city from economic stagnation, rampant violent crime, failing schools, and an epidemic of arson, graffiti, and abandoned buildings. The film tells New York’s comeback story through interviews with the policymakers behind it, including William Bratton, Robert Doar, Raymond Kelly, Heather Mac Donald, and, of course, Rudy Giuliani, alongside other New Yorkers who witnessed their city’s return to greatness.
3:00–5:00 p.m.	Optional Iran War Game	Cloister

Artificial intelligence is rapidly advancing. Though advances in information technology have been reshaping the US labor market for years, the pace of change has likely accelerated. What are the implications for productivity growth, inequality, and employment stability? And what are the broader implications for society's future in a world where machines can do more and more?

Can Major Parties Get Their Acts Together in Time for 2024?

David Brooks

Chris Christie

Rob Portman

Chris Stirewalt (Moderator)

A divided conservative movement, bitter personal rivalries, and a potentially crowded field of hopeful nominees are all likely to make Republicans' road to the 2024 elections long and hard. For Democrats, serious questions about a Joe Biden–Kamala Harris ticket and their own ideological tensions could present great hurdles to clear. Further controversies are bound to emerge between and within the parties, especially over their shifting priorities on pressing problems abroad and their failures to address ever-growing deficits and the national debt. Our panelists will discuss these looming issues and give their first takes on what they heard from potential presidential candidates during our World Forum.
