6:00 – 7:15pm Dinner & Opening Program

Dinner Table Exercise:

1. American society is more polarized than it has been for decades, perhaps since the Civil War. Some have said that Christians need to be more winsome in this context (Tim Keller), offering a respite from the cultural warfare, others have said that we need to be more bold in our confrontation with the culture as it becomes more hostile to traditional Christian values (Eric Metaxas). Is it possible to do both?
2. As we enter the next election cycle, what are your concerns about the role/visibility/perception of Evangelicals and politics?
3. When you think down the road and the direction of the culture, other than Jesus's second coming, where do you have hope for the nation in how we might be able to reduce the polarization/conflict?
