UNITED NATIONS FOUNDATION

January 12, 2024

Dear Kelsey,

On behalf of the United Nations Foundation, I'm happy to invite you to join a congressional learning trip that will examine how the UN is working to deliver improved health, nutrition, and development outcomes in Nepal.

Although Nepal's Global Hunger Index score has significantly improved over the past two decades—now ranking 81st out of 121—the country still has considerable health and nutrition challenges. Today, 25% of all children under the age 5 in Nepal are stunted, 8% are wasted, and 19% are underweight. Additionally, while the prevalence of stunting in the country has declined by nearly half since the mid-1990s, Nepal has less than seven years to further reduce stunting to 15% and wasting to 4% if it is going to meet the health targets set out in the UN's Sustainable Development Goals. Despite substantive progress, these hurdles, and interconnected environmental and economic root causes, have made Nepal's burden of malnutrition the highest among all low-income South Asian countries.

Over the course of four days, we will see how the UN System is working collaboratively to support Nepal-led efforts to ensure children and their families have every opportunity to lead healthy lives. The delegation will spend time in Kathmandu, meeting with the UN Resident Coordinator, U.S. Ambassador to Nepal, and the various officials from the Government of Nepal.

We will then travel into the field, meeting with colleagues from USAID, UNICEF, World Food Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, and more that are working on-the-ground to combat malnutrition and reach food insecure populations—including by improving and expanding children's access to adequate nutritious diets and the deploying micronutrient supplement and micronutrient fortification interventions. We will additionally learn how the UN is helping the country protect vulnerable communities by strengthening its emergency response and natural disaster early warning detection capabilities. You will also have the opportunity to meet with community health workers, technical experts, public health NGOs, and families who have benefitted from U.S. and UN investments.

Trip participants will depart from Washington Dulles International Airport (IAD) on the evening of Friday, February 16, 2024, and return to IAD on the evening of Friday, February 23, 2024.

We would be honored if you would consider joining us for this unique learning opportunity. If you are interested in joining, please let us know as soon as possible.

Best regards,
Jess Pavel

Situated 5km southeast of Kathmandu valley, Patan is considered the oldest among the three cities of Kathmandu valley and enclosed by four stupas erected by Emperor Ashoka in 3rd century BC. Durbar Square (which translates to "palace" or "a court held by a prince") is an important site for Buddhist and Hindu rituals, holy ceremonies, royal events, and kingly coronations. Designated a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1979, Patan is well known for its artistic culture and home to what many consider one of the best museums in Asia.

Heavily impacted by the devastating 2015 earthquakes, Patan Durbar Square has been largely rebuilt. In 2019, U.S. Embassy Kathmandu awarded a $150,000 grant to the Kathmandu Valley Preservation Trust (KVPT) to support the conservation and seismic strengthening of 18th-Century Octagonal Krishna Temple in at Patan Durbar Square, which was built in 1723 A.D The project stabilized, seismically strengthened, and supported urgent restoration work needed to conserve the temple. As part of the Kathmandu Valley Preservation Trust's (KVPT) five-year earthquake response campaign, the project employed local artisans to restore this historic stone structure using the highest international standards.

The NDRRMA in Nepal plays a pivotal role in addressing the country's vulnerability to various natural and human-made disasters. It is responsible for coordinating disaster risk reduction and management efforts across the nation. Nepal, situated in a seismically active region with a diverse topography, faces a range of hazards, including earthquakes, floods, landslides, and avalanches. As such, the NDRRMA's role is of utmost importance in safeguarding the lives and property of the people of Nepal.

The NDRRMA was established to consolidate and strengthen the country's disaster management efforts. Its formation was prompted by the devastating earthquake that struck Nepal in April 2015, which highlighted the need for a more coordinated and robust approach to disaster preparedness and response. Prior to the establishment of the NDRRMA, disaster management in Nepal was fragmented, with various government agencies and organizations working independently.

The delegation will have a working lunch with UN colleagues from UNICEF, WFP and FAO to learn how the UN is supporting the Government of Nepal in addressing malnutrition and food security challenges, while enabling the government to strengthen its own response and intervention mechanisms, including how the UN, with financial support from the European Union, has supported the Government of Nepal in the implementation of its Multi-Sector Nutrition Plan (MSNP-II), which was completed in 2022.

Nepal is one of the most food insecure countries in Asia. Estimates suggest that approximately 38% of the country's population does not consume enough food and is undernourished. In recent years, the combination of climate-related disasters, high food prices, and low economic growth has resulted in higher food insecurity in the most vulnerable communities, particularly in Western Nepal. The mid-Western

Mountain regions have some of the worst hunger rates in the world, highlighting the spatial differences in vulnerability across the country.

Location: Chez Caroline, Baber Mahal Revisited, Tanka Prasad Ghumti Sadak

Anticipated Speakers in Attendance: Alice Akunga, UNICEF Representative to Nepal; Mr. Robert Kasca, World Food Programme Representative in Nepal & Country Director; Mr. Ken Shimizu, UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) Representative in Nepal

7:00pm – 8:30pm Working Dinner with Julien Chevillard UNDP Deputy Resident Representative for Nepal; Binda Magar, UNDP Governance Specialist; and Patricia Fernandez-Pacheco UN Women Country Representative

The delegation will have a working dinner with UNDP Deputy Resident Representative, UNDP Governance Specialist, and Patricia Fernandez-Pacheco, UN Women Country Representative to learn how UNDP and UN Women are supporting Nepal's historic and ongoing transition to federalism.

Nepal enacted a new constitution in 2015 that established the country as a federal democratic republic with three tiers of government – local, provincial and federal. The decision was a historic move, shifting the country from a unitary form of government to a federal system, creating 753 local levels, seven provincial governments, and one federal government. This shift provides opportunities to decentralize development benefits and make service delivery more effective and accountable. At the same time, state restructuring on this scale is unchartered territory for Nepal and ensuring a smooth transition is a daunting task. Jurisdictional overlap among the three tiers of government, lack of clarity and coherence between policies and devolved powers, reducing duplication of efforts, and creating government capacity are key challenges to Nepal's successful transition to federalism.

Built some time around the 14th century, Boudhanath Stupa is said to have been created just after the passing of the Buddha. Located on an old trade route with Tibet, Boudhanath is one of the largest stupas in Nepal and was declared a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1979. The huge offering site quickly became a focal point of worship and offering in the area. The structure of the building consists of a giant dome, on the top which sits a Buddhist pyramid tower. All of this sits on top of huge steps shaped like mandalas themselves. Among the Nepalese in Kathmandu, the stupa is simply referred to as "Chorten Chenpo" which translates to "Great Tower" or just "Great Stupa."

Situated 5km southeast of Kathmandu valley, Patan is considered the oldest among the three cities of Kathmandu valley and enclosed by four stupas erected by Emperor Ashoka in 3rd century BC. Durbar Square (which translates to "palace" or "a court held by a prince") is an important site for Buddhist and Hindu rituals, holy ceremonies, royal events, and kingly coronations. Designated a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1979, Patan is well known for its artistic culture and home to what many consider one of the best museums in Asia.

Heavily impacted by the devastating 2015 earthquakes, Patan Durbar Square has been largely rebuilt. In 2019, U.S. Embassy Kathmandu awarded a $150,000 grant to the Kathmandu Valley Preservation Trust (KVPT) to support the conservation and seismic strengthening of 18th-Century Octagonal Krishna Temple in at Patan Durbar Square, which was built in 1723 A.D The project stabilized, seismically strengthened, and supported urgent restoration work needed to conserve the temple. As part of the Kathmandu Valley Preservation Trust's (KVPT) five-year earthquake response campaign, the project employed local artisans to restore this historic stone structure using the highest international standards.

12:00pm – 1:15pm Meeting with Anil Pokhrel, Chief Executive, National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Authority

The NDRRMA in Nepal plays a pivotal role in addressing the country's vulnerability to various natural and human-made disasters. It is responsible for coordinating disaster risk reduction and management efforts across the nation. Nepal, situated in a seismically active region with a diverse topography, faces a range of hazards, including earthquakes, floods, landslides, and avalanches. As such, the NDRRMA's role is of utmost importance in safeguarding the lives and property of the people of Nepal.

The NDRRMA was established to consolidate and strengthen the country's disaster management efforts. Its formation was prompted by the devastating earthquake that struck Nepal in April 2015, which highlighted the need for a more coordinated and robust approach to disaster preparedness and response. Prior to the establishment of the NDRRMA, disaster management in Nepal was fragmented, with various government agencies and organizations working independently.

The delegation will have a working lunch with UN colleagues from UNICEF, WFP and FAO to learn how the UN is supporting the Government of Nepal in addressing malnutrition and food security challenges, while enabling the government to strengthen its own response and intervention mechanisms, including how the UN, with financial support from the European Union, has supported the Government of Nepal in the implementation of its Multi-Sector Nutrition Plan (MSNP-II), which was completed in 2022.

Nepal is one of the most food insecure countries in Asia. Estimates suggest that approximately 38% of the country's population does not consume enough food and is undernourished. In recent years, the combination of climate-related disasters, high food prices, and low economic growth has resulted in higher food insecurity in the most vulnerable communities, particularly in Western Nepal. The mid-Western Mountain regions have some of the worst hunger rates in the world, highlighting the spatial differences in vulnerability across the country.

7:00pm – 8:30pm Working Dinner with Julien Chevillard UNDP Deputy Resident Representative for Nepal; Binda Magar, UNDP Governance Specialist; and Patricia Fernandez-Pacheco UN Women Country Representative

The delegation will have a working dinner with UNDP Deputy Resident Representative, UNDP Governance Specialist, and Patricia Fernandez-Pacheco, UN Women Country Representative to learn how UNDP and UN Women are supporting Nepal's historic and ongoing transition to federalism.

Nepal enacted a new constitution in 2015 that established the country as a federal democratic republic with three tiers of government – local, provincial and federal. The decision was a historic move, shifting the country from a unitary form of government to a federal system, creating 753 local levels, seven provincial governments, and one federal government. This shift provides opportunities to decentralize development benefits and make service delivery more effective and accountable. At the same time, state restructuring on this scale is unchartered territory for Nepal and ensuring a smooth transition is a daunting task. Jurisdictional overlap among the three tiers of government, lack of clarity and coherence between policies and devolved powers, reducing duplication of efforts, and creating government capacity are key challenges to Nepal's successful transition to federalism.

Located on an old trade route with Tibet, Boudhanath is one of the largest stupas in Nepal and was declared a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1979. The huge offering site quickly became a focal point of worship and offering in the area. The structure of the building consists of a giant dome, on the top which sits a Buddhist pyramid tower.
