History of Congressional Travel

The America First Policy Institute (AFPI) has experience sponsoring and coordinating educational travel for congressional staff in compliance with Senate ethics rules. This experience includes travel programs historically conducted by the Senate Working Group (SWG), an organization founded in 2021 that was later acquired and integrated into AFPI. Since its inception, SWG organized multiple domestic educational programs for Senate Chiefs of Staff, Committee Staff Directors, and senior congressional staff, focused on policy education, briefings with subject-matter experts, and site-based learning. All such travel was conducted pursuant to Senate Ethics Committee requirements, including advance approval, detailed itineraries, and full transparency regarding expenses. Following its acquisition, AFPI has assumed oversight and administration of these programs and continues to apply the same compliance standards and internal controls for all congressional travel.

Educational Activities

The America First Policy Institute conducts public policy and civics education, including policy research and analysis, educational briefings, seminars, and publications designed to inform policymakers, congressional staff, and the public on a range of public policy issues. AFPI regularly produces policy papers, reports, and issue analyses across a variety of subject areas, and hosts educational forums designed to provide nonpartisan, substantive information on policy challenges and proposed solutions. The Institute also convenes subject-matter experts, former government officials, and industry leaders to engage in educational discussions and briefings intended to inform policymaking and public understanding.
