Hi Liz,

EFI Foundation is pleased to extend a formal invitation to join us for a program in Minnesota and South Dakota this August:

Energy in Practice: A Midwest Tour of Clean Fuels and Electricity Infrastructure

August 24–27, 2026 | Minneapolis, MN to Sioux Falls, SD

Organized and funded by the EFI Foundation, a 501(c)(3) organization

Relevance to Official Duties

The subject matter of this program is directly relevant to congressional staff whose work involves energy, agriculture, and environmental policy. Topics covered across site visits, briefings, and working dinners will include the Renewable Fuel Standard, the 45Z clean fuel production credit, agricultural conservation programs under the farm bill, clean energy tax provisions, and electricity infrastructure — all areas that fall within the legislative jurisdiction of Congress and may be subject to upcoming authorization, appropriations, or oversight activity. EFI Foundation Founder and CEO Ernest J. Moniz will participate throughout the program.

Program Overview

All scheduled time during this program will be devoted to officially connected activity.

I have attached a preliminary itinerary for your reference. All site visits are confirmed; dinner speakers on August 25 are still being finalized. Please treat this document as confidential and do not share it. More info available here: Energy in Practice: A Midwest Tour of Clean Fuels and Electricity Infrastructure

Participants will engage with facility operators, utility executives, state regulators, former federal officials, and regional energy experts at a series of operating facilities in western Minnesota and South Dakota:

- Xcel Energy Sherco Energy Hub (Becker, MN): A coal campus in transition to a multi-technology clean energy hub, including large-scale solar, long-duration iron-air battery storage, and a new 170-mile high-voltage transmission line. Discussion will examine how transmission investment and storage enable coal capacity replacement and how workforce transition policy is being implemented in coal-dependent communities.

- POET Bioprocessing (Big Stone City, SD and Chancellor, SD): Two corn ethanol biorefineries, including a first-of-kind commercial deployment of Antora Energy's thermal battery technology displacing natural gas in the production process, and a facility whose low carbon intensity score has opened premium export markets largely independent of domestic federal mandates. Discussion will address how carbon intensity scoring and federal clean fuel provisions are reshaping competitive dynamics for domestic ethanol producers.
- T&R Electric Supply Co. (Colman, SD): The nation's largest supplier of remanufactured distribution and power-class transformers. Discussion will address how transformer supply chain constraints — with new-manufacturer lead times now stretching two to three years — are limiting grid expansion and the connection of new generation.
- Low-Carbon Agricultural Practices (Turner County, SD): A working corn farm implementing USDA-supported conservation practices, including cover cropping, reduced tillage, and precision nutrient management. Discussion will focus on how federal farm bill programs shape on-farm decision-making and upstream carbon intensity outcomes.
- Tri-Cross Dairy Renewable Natural Gas Facility (Viborg, SD): A dairy operation producing approximately one million gallons of pipeline-quality RNG annually. Discussion will examine how livestock methane capture projects are structured and financed, and how negative-carbon fuel pathways from agricultural operations could scale across the region.

Working dinners in Brookings and Sioux Falls will bring together state legislators, regulators, former federal officials, and regional energy and agriculture experts to examine how federal policy is translating into investment decisions and operational outcomes across the Midwest. The program concludes with a structured staff debrief. Approximately one week following the trip, EFI Foundation will convene a follow-on session in Washington, D.C. to synthesize observations with the full group of participating staff.

Logistics

Participants will depart DCA on the afternoon of Monday, August 24, and return to DCA on the evening of Thursday, August 27. All transportation, accommodations, and meals during the program will be provided by EFI Foundation in accordance with federal per diem rates.

Ethics

This trip has been reviewed and cleared through the congressional ethics process. The event website includes a checklist of documents required for the ethics approval process.

Purpose and Details

Provide a brief description of the trip.

Energy in Practice: A Midwest Tour of Clean Fuels and Electricity Infrastructure is an educational fact-finding program that will provide participants with firsthand exposure to energy production, fuel manufacturing, electricity generation, transmission infrastructure, and emerging energy technologies. The program will combine site visits, expert presentations, and educational discussions to provide participants with a comprehensive understanding of energy infrastructure and technology deployment. The program is designed to help participants understand the implications of federal policies and the opportunities and challenges implementing those policies across the energy sector. Through visits to operating facilities and discussions with facility operators, technical experts, and local stakeholders, participants will learn about the technologies, operations, workforce needs, economic impacts, and policy considerations associated with developing and deploying Midwest energy projects.

Explain how the purpose of the trip relates to your organization's mission.

The trip directly supports the EFI Foundation's mission to advance understanding of the technologies, infrastructure, and policy options needed to support a low-carbon energy future. Consistent with the Foundation's work analyzing pathways to deploy energy and climate solutions, the program provides participants with firsthand exposure to energy facilities, infrastructure, and operational practices that are central to the nation's energy transition. By connecting participants with technical experts, facility operators, and local stakeholders, the trip complements the Foundation's research, thought leadership, educational programming, and stakeholder convenings. The program is designed to improve understanding of the opportunities and challenges associated with deploying clean fuels and electricity infrastructure and to support informed, evidence-based decision-making on energy and climate issues. The experience also strengthens participants' understanding of energy technologies.

Energy in Practice: A Midwest Tour of Clean Fuels and Electricity Infrastructure

With financial support from unrestricted funding for the EFI Foundation, 501(c)(3)

South Dakota and Minnesota

August 24-27, 2026

MISSION GOALS: The goal of this trip is to connect congressional staff with the realities of clean energy deployment across industrial supply chains in the Midwest. EFI Foundation will facilitate site visits to ethanol biorefineries, corn farms, a dairy-based renewable natural gas facility, and electricity infrastructure in Minnesota and South Dakota, examining how policy incentives shape real-world operational decisions across agriculture, fuels, and power systems.

RELEVANCE TO OFFICIAL DUTIES: The subject matter of this trip is directly relevant to congressional staff whose work involves energy, agriculture, and environmental policy. Topics of discussion will include, but are not limited to, the Renewable Fuel Standard, clean fuel standards, agricultural conservation programs, clean energy tax provisions, and electricity transmission infrastructure — all areas that fall within the legislative jurisdiction of Congress and may be subject to upcoming authorization, appropriations, or oversight activity.

LOCATION: The purpose of travel to Minnesota and South Dakota is to attend site visits and stakeholder meetings across the eastern region of the state. EFI Foundation will take participants to facilities in Western Minnesota, the Sioux Falls area, Turner County, and northeastern South Dakota.

Participants will discuss questions and policy topics they intend to examine during site visits.
8:30 – 10:00 AM	Site Visit: Xcel Energy Sherco Energy Hub – Becker, MN Participants will tour Xcel Energy's Sherburne County Generating Station (Sherco) campus as the site transitions from one of the Midwest's largest coal facilities to a multi-technology clean energy hub. Three coal units totaling approximately 2,400 MW are being retired on a phased schedule (Unit 2 retired December 2023; Units 1 and 3 retiring 2026 and 2030), with replacement capacity that includes 710 MW of solar across three project phases — the largest solar development in the Upper Midwest — a 10 MW / 1,000 MWh Form Energy iron-air long-duration battery storage system, 300–

600 MW of short-duration battery storage, and a new 170-mile high-voltage transmission line.

Discussion will examine how transmission investment and long-duration storage are enabling the practical replacement of coal capacity, and how the site's worker transition plan — including a no-layoff pledge for existing employees — addresses workforce policy challenges in coal-dependent communities.

Presenter: Brian Behm, Senior Director; Jamie Smith, Business Process Specialist; Trystin Artiga, Manager, Renewable Operations; Luke Molus, Senior Manager, Operations; Michelle Schmitz, Manager, Operations

10:15 AM Pick up lunch from Dueling Brews

10:30 AM Drive ~2.5 hours to Big Stone. Eat lunch on the bus.

1:30 – 3:30 PM Tour and Briefing: POET Bioprocessing – Big Stone City

Participants will tour POET's 105-million-gallon-per-year corn ethanol biorefinery and receive a briefing on the facility's integration with Otter Tail Power and Antora Energy's thermal battery technology. Antora's system uses electricity to heat solid carbon blocks, storing energy as heat that generates steam piped directly into POET's ethanol production process — displacing the natural gas that would otherwise provide that process heat. Discussion will examine what it takes to deploy first-of-kind clean energy technology at commercial industrial scale — including how private capital, utility partnerships, and carbon market incentives aligned to make this project viable without a direct federal mandate driving the investment.

Presenters: Blaine Gomer, General Manager, POET Bioprocessing – Big Stone City

3:30 – 5:30 PM Drive ~2 hours to hotel

5:30 PM Check into Comfort Suites University.

6:45 PM Meet in the lobby and drive to Good Roots Farm.

7:00 – 9:00 PM Working Dinner: Low-Carbon Energy Technology, Local Investment & State Policy (Brookings)

This dinner will examine the role of state universities and research institutions in bridging the gap between laboratory innovation and commercial-scale deployment, and what that pipeline means for local economic development — exploring how academic research partnerships, industry collaboration, and regional investment are turning emerging clean energy technologies into operating facilities and jobs.

9:00 – 10:30 AM — Site Visit: T&R Electric Supply Co., Inc. – Colman

Participants will tour T&R Electric Supply Co., Inc., the nation's largest supplier of remanufactured distribution and power-class transformers, operating a 61-acre campus with 221,000 square feet of manufacturing space and an inventory of 42,000 units. Discussion will focus on the critical role of transformer availability in grid expansion — including the connection of new wind generation and large industrial loads such as ethanol biorefineries — and how post-COVID supply chain disruptions, with new-manufacturer lead times now stretching two to three years, are straining utilities' ability to grow and maintain the grid.

Presenter: Ryan Schneider, Chief Electrical Engineer; Keaton Westover, VP of Sales/Executive Management; Shane Roth, VP of Operations/Executive Management

10:30 AM — Drive ~1 hour to Chancellor, SD.

11:30 – 2:00 PM — Tour and Working Lunch: POET Bioprocessing – Chancellor

Participants will tour POET's 125-million-gallon-per-year corn ethanol biorefinery and receive a briefing on facility operations, feedstock sourcing, energy inputs, and carbon intensity reduction efforts. Discussion will focus on how carbon intensity scoring is reshaping competitive positioning for ethanol producers — including how Chancellor's low CI profile has opened premium export markets on the West Coast and in Canada that are largely independent of domestic federal mandates. A working lunch will be served on-site.

Presenter: Terry Hurlbert, General Manager, POET Bioprocessing – Chancellor
